CASEMENT ASKS ACQUITTAL ON THE CHARGE OF TREASON

Claims Crown Failed to Show Alleged Acts Were Committed Within Realm.

SEVERAL MORE TESTIFY.

Prosecution Displays Irish Rebel Flag and Secret Code Against Prisoner.

LONDON, June 27.—The Crown this afternoon rested its case against Sir Roger Casement, charged with high treason.

Solicitor Sullivan, of counsel for the defense, then argued a motion to quash the indictment on the ground that it specified that the alleged treasonable acts were committed within the realm of the empire, whereas the testimony showed they were committed outside.

John McCarthy, a Curraghmore farmer, was the first witness when Casement's trial was resumed today. It was McCarthy who first informed the police of the landing of three strange men near Tralee, Ireland, and subsequently caused the arrest of Casement.

McCarthy arose before daylight Good Friday morning and discovered there was no water in the house. He went to a well a mile distant. On his return he saw drifting near the shore the collapsible boat in which Sir Roger and his confederate had landed from a German submarine.

McCarthy testified he found a dagger in the boat and noticed the footprints of three persons in the sand. His little girl found three pistols nearby. These discoveries aroused his suspicions, he said, and he sent one of his laborers, Pat Delaney, to the nearest barracks to inform the police. Mary Gorman, living on a nearby farm, told of seeing three men go by the farmyard shortly after dawn Good Friday morning. Casement smiled when she identified him as one of the trio. Sir Roger had exchanged his morning coat for a gray sack suit, when he appeared in court today, and apparently was in fine spirits.

Sergeant Thomas J. O'Hanlon, of the Irish Constabulary, who found Casement hiding in an old fort, and arrested him, repeated the testimony he gave at the preliminary hearing. On cross-examination, he admitted a large part of Ireland was arming in preparation for domestic war. He said it was common knowledge that large quantities of arms had been imported into Ulster. The residents of North Ireland were not assured of any military protection against the Ulstermen, he said.

Sergeant O'Hanlon identified revolvers, maps of Ireland and a flag of the revolutionists, which, he said, were found in a handbag buried in the earth. There was a stir in the court room as the big green emblem of the rebels was spread out in the center of the room, and all eyes turned toward the prisoner. He shifted uneasily in his seat and then leaned back with folded arms, smiling nervously as he gazed at the flag.

Alexander Sullivan, chief counsel for the defense, volunteered the information to the court that the emblem on the flag was that of the city of Limerick.

During the testimony of Constable Riley, who assisted in the arrest of Sir Roger, the prosecution introduced as evidence a paper on which was written a code Sir Roger is said to have thrown away shortly after his arrest. This paper was picked up and given to Riley. The prosecution has laid great stress on the importance of this code, which it contends was intended for communication with German agents.

Opposite a series of numbers on this paper were sentences such as "Send cannon and ammunition" and "Send more explosives." The prosecution attempted to establish that some of the pencilled figures on this code were German characters.

The Crown introduced as witnesses several constabulary officers, who testified regarding Casement's arrest. District Inspector Britten of Scotland Yard testified concerning the confession made to him by Donald Bailey, one of Casement's followers, who is awaiting trial for treason. Sidney H. Waghorn, attorney on the part of Sir Roger, told along the course of the German ship, Auda, carrying munitions to the Irish rebels.

In cross-examining several of the constabulary witnesses counsel for Casement quoted from speeches pronounced in Ireland, showing British members of Parliament were determined to resist Home Rule.

A Home Is No Better Than Its Kitchen

THE same principle applies as in that of a chain which is "no stronger than its weakest link." The kitchen must be in keeping with all other parts of the home.

Garbage must not accumulate. A GAS INCINERATOR burns every bit of garbage, leaving only a fine ash. Uses very little gas.

Hot water is an essential. It cannot be dispensed with. Cleanliness and health demand an unending supply of hot water. A GAS WATER HEATER supplies as much hot water as you need at any hour of the day or night.

GAS WATER HEATERS AND GAS INCINERATORS

Sold on Easy Installments

Where coal is used there must be dust, ashes and the bother of kindlings, and the fire must burn all day and all night. That means discomfort.
